THREATS AND HOPES FOR CIVIL SOCIETY IN THE UNITED STATES AND CZECH REPUBLIC

Civil Society is a society in which the decisions and actions of families, government, business and nonprofit organizations impact the ability of people to prosper, reach their potential as productive citizens, and flourish as human beings. This session examines the current state of social progress indicators in both the United States and the Czech Republic, the forces that threaten them, hopes for our future, and what we can do to positively impact progress towards this important ideal.
